

Dr. Olga Mastianica-Stankevič – researcher of the Lithuanian Institute of History. In 2011 defended her dissertation: “The Importance of Women's Education in Lithuanian Society in the end of the 18th Century and the Beginning of the 20th Century”. Research areas: the history of Lithuanian education in the 19th century, dissemination of modern Lithuanian nationalism in society, issues of the formation of the national identity of the nobility in the end of the 19th century and the beginning of the 20th century. Wrote two monographs, 23 scientific articles in other Lithuanian and foreign publications, is actively collaborating with scientists from Japan, Poland and Russia. Participated in four national and international projects, is leading a national project coordinated by the Research Council of Lithuania. She has made presentations at international conferences in Japan, Poland and Russia. In 2016 was awarded the Young Scientist Scholarship of the Lithuanian Academy of Sciences.